

Process for handling animals arriving at Stockholm Arlanda Airport

Strict importation rules for animals (dogs, cats and ferrets) in Sweden

- Sweden is one of the few countries that do not have rabies. We therefore have strict regulations that must be complied with in order to bring an animal into the country.
- Animals can travel either as baggage together with their owner or as cargo.
- Animals that travel as baggage (checked or hand baggage) are handled by ground handling companies and Swedish Customs in the passenger terminals.
- Animals that travel as cargo (so-called commercial animals) are handled by freight companies and the border control post (BCP) in the cargo terminals.
- The processes for these two categories are somewhat different and are described separately in this appendix.
- Swedavia operates Sweden's only animal quarantine facility at Stockholm Arlanda Airport and also provides a holding facility for animals that will be sent back, Swedavia Animal Center.
- There is an animal room in Terminal 5 intended for animals that will only wait for a few hours.

Companies and organisations involved in the animal handling process

- Swedavia
- Swedish Board of Agriculture (agency responsible for the importation of animals)

- Ground handling companies
- Cargo terminal companies
- Distriktsveterinärerna (official veterinarian responsible for Swedavia Animal Center)
- The importer/passenger

The Swedish Board of Agriculture decides

Animals travelling as baggage

When an animal (dog, cat or ferret) lands with its owner at Stockholm Arlanda, Swedish Customs checks to see if the animal complies with the Swedish Board of Agriculture or SBA (Jordbruksverket)'s importation regulations by examining the animal's passport and vaccination certificate and checking its chip marking.

If something seems wrong, the Swedish Board of Agriculture is contacted to make a decision about whether the animal should be allowed to enter Sweden or whether it should be re-exported.

Animals travelling as cargo – commercial animals

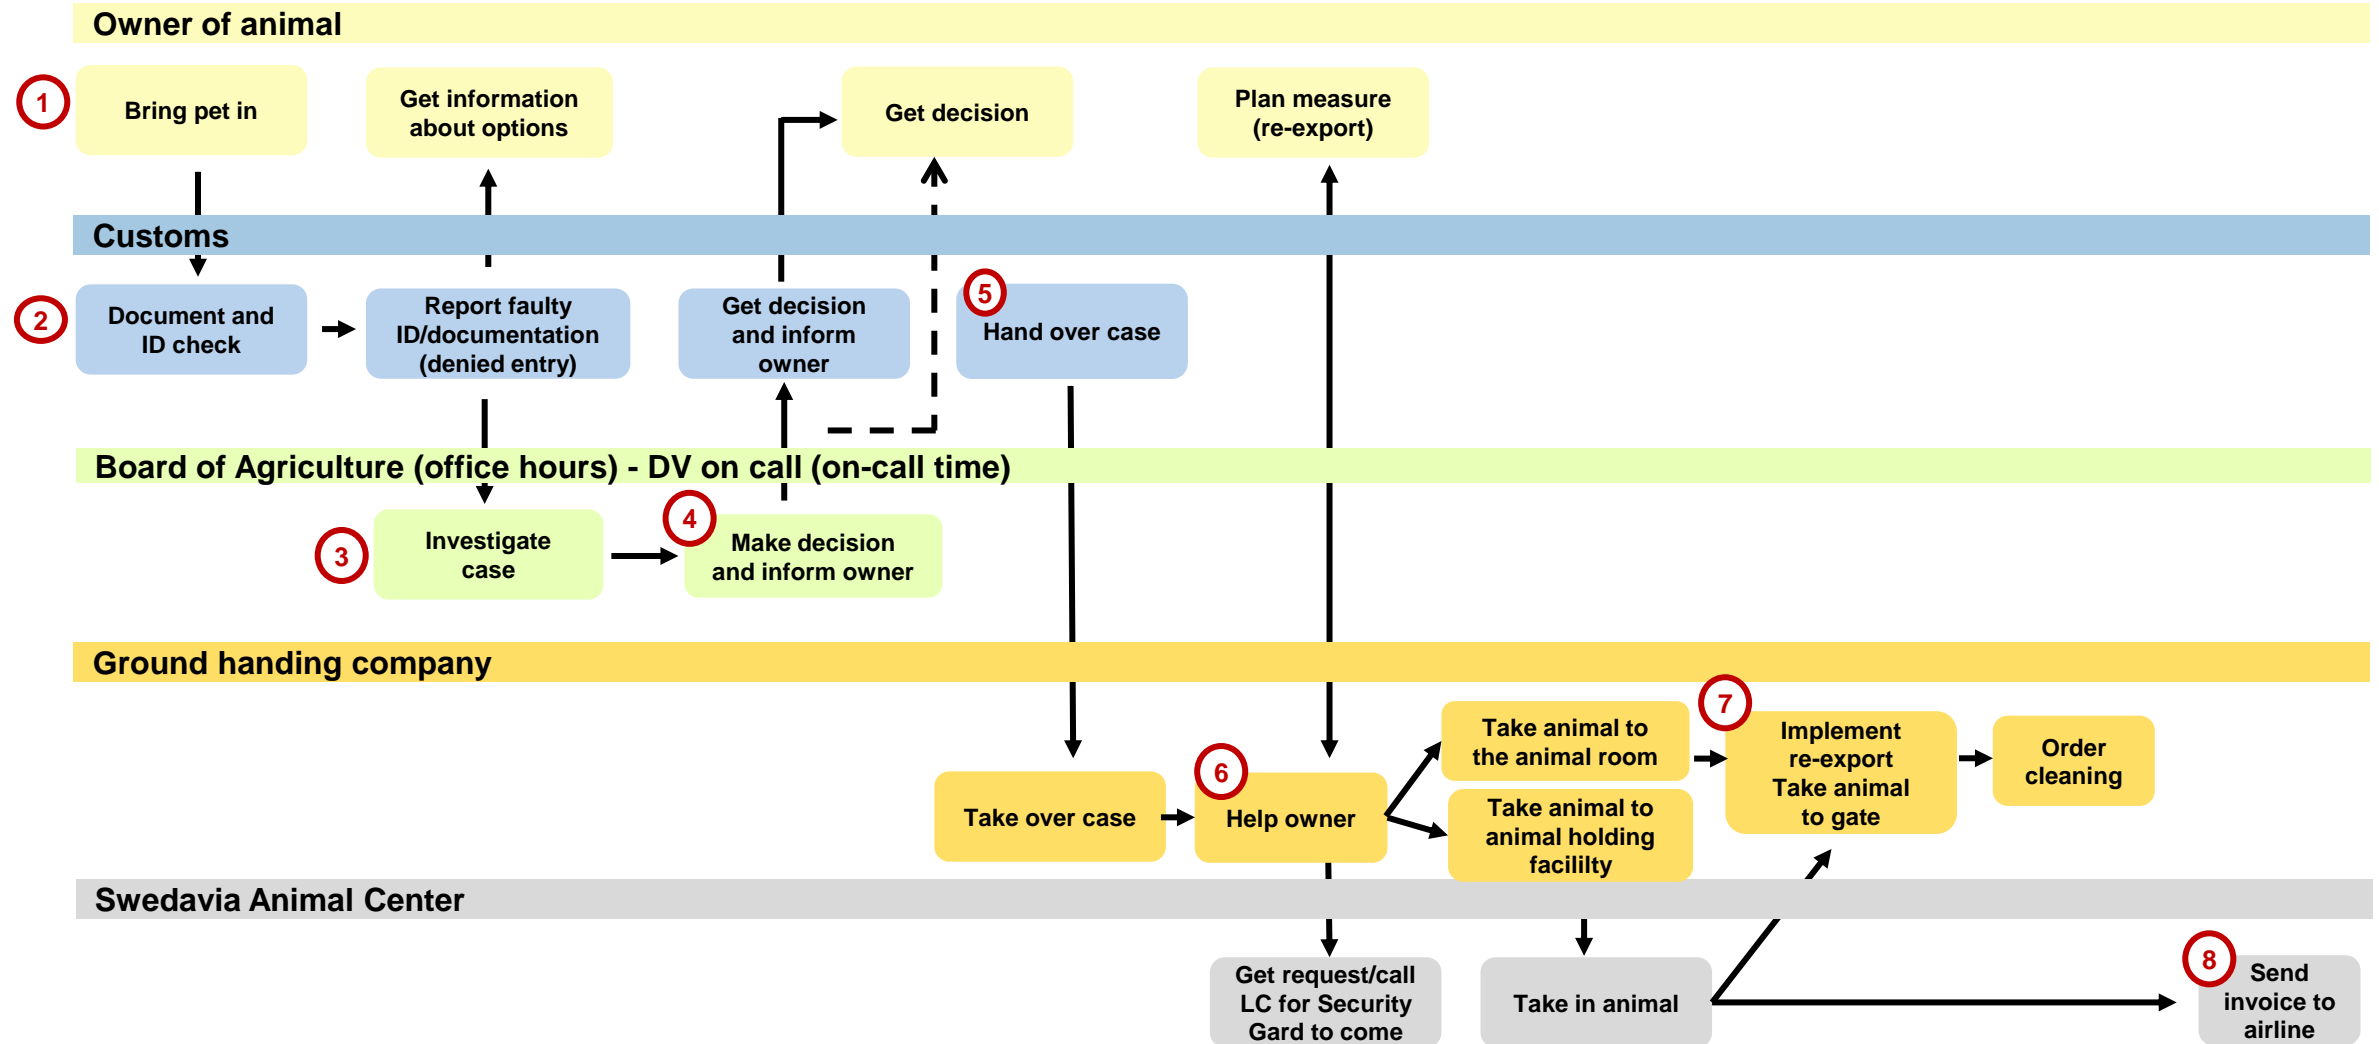

Commercial animals are checked by freight companies and the Border Control (BC) veterinarian, who works on behalf of the Swedish Board of Agriculture.
